Virulent Newcastle Disease (VND) in Backyard Poultry and Avian in Los Angeles, San Bernardino, and Riverside Counties

The California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA) has detected virulent Newcastle Disease (VND) in chickens in Los Angeles, San Bernardino Counties, and Riverside Counties.

- On 05/16/18, CDFA detected VND in a small flock of backyard exhibition chickens in Los Angeles County, and confirmed on 05/17/18 by the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS).
- On 06/27/18, CDFA detected VND in backyard exhibition chickens in Riverside county and was confirmed on 06/30/18 by USDA APHIS.
- CDFA is the state lead on the incident, with support from Cal OES and in collaboration with USDA.
- USDA Incident Management Teams (IMTs) continue to rotate every two weeks to facilitate the management and support the response to the incident. The Gold IMT transition into a two week rotation beginning 07/01/18.
- CDFA confirmed there are no commercial premises currently involved and there is no public health risk due to this virus. Commercial surveillance actively continue to work with commercial premises in the surveillance zones on biosecurity to help protect their poultry from VND.
- Backyard Surveillance (education and outreach) continues in the surveillance zones.

WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

Northern California:

- High temperatures from 100 to 108 are expected across the hottest valleys of Trinity, interior Del Norte, and interior northeast Humboldt Counties this afternoon.

Southern California:

- Decreasing mid-level moisture will limit thunderstorm potential over the mountains this weekend. There may be an isolated shower/thunderstorm or two over the highest peaks of the mountains each afternoon. Moisture begins to increase Monday, which may lead to more widespread afternoon storms over the mountains. The risk of flash flooding and severe storms is minimal all three days.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

 High Risk due to Lightning NW Mtns, NE California, Northern Sierra, and Far Eastside today. Same Areas Plus MNF Portion of Midcoast-Mendocino on Sunday *****

Moist unstable air over the region will lead to more showers and thunderstorms this afternoon and evening. The main focus will be the higher terrain of the NW Mountains, NE California, Northern Sierra, and Far Eastside. Thunderstorms may only be isolated, slow-moving, and capable of producing a quarter to half an inch of rainfall, so today's lightning event is only considered a marginal High Risk event.

Thunderstorms Sunday afternoon and evening will be stronger, more numerous, and impact a larger area, including the MNF portion of the Mid Coast-Mendocino. Storm movement should be quicker, so there is a higher risk of lightning ignitions on Sunday. Outflow winds from storms on Sunday could reach 40-50 mph. By Monday high pressure will push the moist unstable air out of the region and hotter and drier weather can then be expected through Wednesday. The marine layer will be shallow and confined to the immediate coast. Areas inland from the coast will be 7-12 degrees warmer than normal. Typical light slope and sea breeze winds will prevail. The dominant high pressure heat dome should shift over the Great Basin Thursday-Friday and allow another surge of Monsoon moisture to move northward over the region and bring more shower and thunderstorm chances.

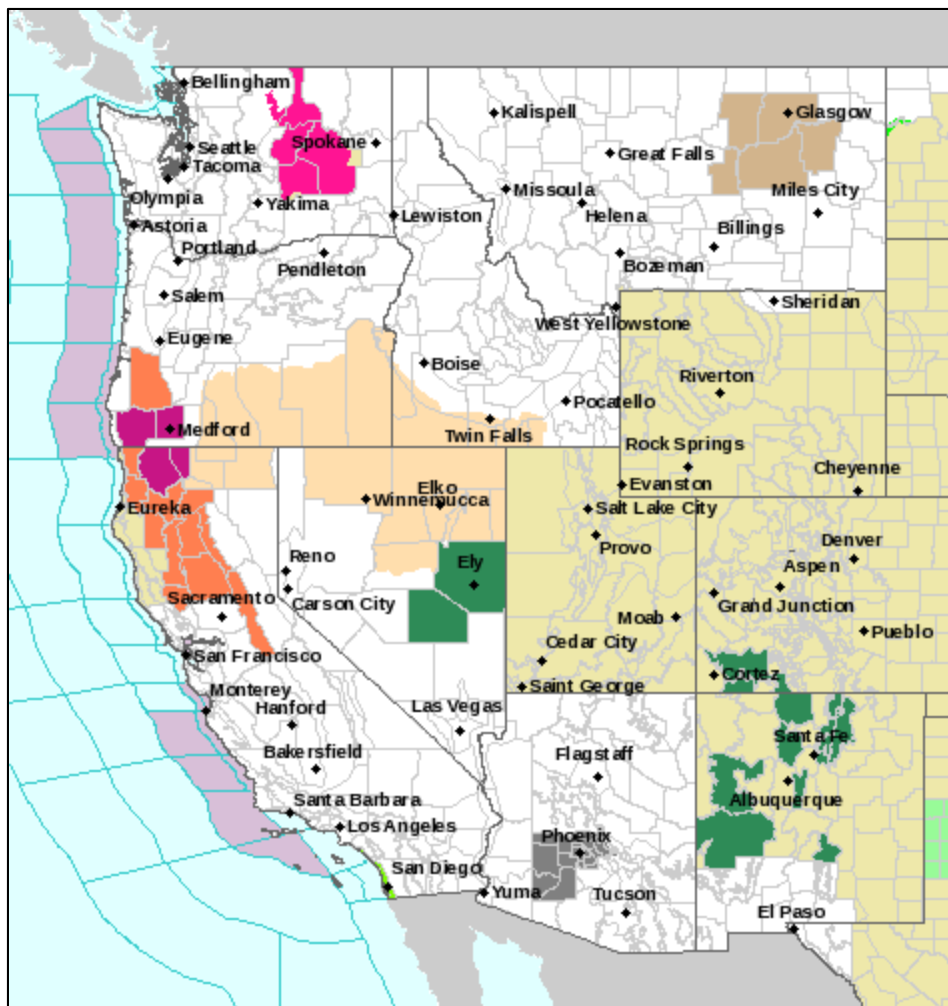

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Isolated wet afternoon thunderstorms over the mountains and deserts through this weekend then scattered wet thunderstorms next week**

High pressure centered off Point Conception will keep it fairly stable across the region this weekend with only isolated afternoon showers and wet thunderstorms over the Sierra and over the mountains and deserts of Southern California east of the Cajon Pass. The center of the high will move eastward over the Great Basin by Monday and over the Four Corners Area by Thursday. This eastward movement to the high will cause instability to increase next week. Scattered showers and thunderstorms will form over the mountains and deserts of Southern California starting Monday afternoon and then spread northward into the Sierra by Tuesday afternoon. These scattered showers and thunderstorms will then continue across the mountains and deserts through the end of next week. A disturbance in the flow around the high will bring the possibility of isolated showers and thunderstorms to the coastal and valley locations of Southern California Monday night through Wednesday afternoon and to the coastal and valley locations of Central California Wednesday night through Friday afternoon. Temperatures will remain near to a little above normal through the end of next week, with 80s to low 90s across the mountains and 90s to 102 in the valleys. Minimum humidity will remain between 20% and 40% through the end of next week, except it will be in the teens across the Central Coast Monday through Wednesday. There will be strong and erratic winds in and near any thunderstorms, otherwise winds will be light through the end of next week.
